THE use of the various Colonial possessions of Great Britain has been the subject of lengthened discussion and varied opinion. Some places have been looked upon as "outlets,"others as "keys," and others again as mere appendages, which, if costly it is necessary to keep up the national dignity. In old days Hongkong was regarded as a key; but since our policy towards China has changed, and we have established relations them. The man who gave them said his name with the capital, this bearing of the Colony is much diminished in importance. Still Hongkong is really a very valuable possession; Its true use its that of an official watering place. There are always a large number of really very nice gentlemen seeking appoint- ing to find out the man. The case was then ments in Downing-street, and it is of course necessary that the Colonial Office should have the means of satisfying these and of one in Yec-luk-lune, were fined each natural calls upon it. Oue consideration alone is quite sufficient to demonstrate the absolute necessity of having Hongkong as a watering place for officials, namely, that if it were not for Hongkong it would be simply impossible to find appointments for a large on its appearing that the child in question had number of people at all. The peculiar talents for local administration; for finance and for law, which are displayed in Hongkong, could not be exercised in any other British Colony; and here we see the working of a principle of "eternal fitness" in the existence of this the lat instant the defendant took complainant distant possession. There are the officials and here is Hongkong, the one the everlasting complement of the other, the yang and bed. Next morning he dressed, and when in the the win, in the words of Chinese philosophy, ever co-existent and co-relative.

Here, removed from the busy haunts of men, old age can still totter on to the high seats, and give forth words of wisdom in accents so faint and faltering that they would of the money. Here, youth can shout with the joyousness of his strength, put on his silver rimmed hat and play the soldier, undisturbed by the more pressing cares which elsewhere would call forth his energy to suppress the burglar, the thief and the gambles been stolen he was now left penniless. Here, the pale student can learn the glorious ancient language of China, and try his powers in the barmless exercise of issuing proclamations and notifications. Nowhere too refuge offered to that large class whose ambi. official telegrams dated Madrid the 14th and thereon corn, wine, and oil, with the customary tion is greater than their talents, and who are more distinguished by the definiteness the names of the new Ministers. It is not surprising that Colonial Secretaries should be fully alive to the uses for bearing dates subsequent to the abdication, ed amon; the workmen, and the procession which Hongkong is fitted, and should send out | have been made public, -that is, when they cona sufficient supply of their friends to prevent this pleasing watering place from becoming editorial comments on those officially published dull. It is, of course, to be regretted that the island is rather small; but still it accommodates a very fair number, and is wonderfully fertile in posts and pay. Of late years, as a customer at a cheap restaurant, pointing out of their lives. This grimy here of the throttletrade has become less satisfactory, many people have been disposed to doubt the good they do by living in Hongkong. There is do you consider that a proper thing for a man becoming seriously questioned. He determined nothing more aut to lead to despondency than the idea that one's life is useless; but the resident out here need not give way to this umbrella in a fifteen cent plate of hash ?" feeling, as he can always console himself with the reflection that his existence is at all events not useless, so long as he contributes twenty-three Irish, nine Americans, four bouring cornfield. THE PIER AND GODOWNS.

The new pier and godowns, which have now tieen completed under the direction of Messrs Wilson and Salway, architects and civil engineers, form a noticeable addition to the engineering works in Hongkong. The pier is 1,000 feet long by 50 wide, and is built in the most solid manner of Manila hardwood, which has been carefully selected as most likely to resist the action of sea worms. This, unfortupurpose. There are two lines of rail running the other in wet weather. This will be very J. J. Skinner, left this for Patani in charge handy in transhipping cargo, as one steamer can lie on one side, and the other, the opposite side of the wharf. The shed is to be 250 feet long by 25 feet in width. No doubt it will prove of advantage, in protecting cargo, shipped under Mr. Holt's pet bills of lading, from damage by rain. The trucks are capable of taking six tons each, and are of much value in landing such cargo as rice, as the whole of the leaking from the large is saved, and can be gathered up from the trucks. The trucks carry the cargo right into the godowns, in front of which there is a fine airy space with platforms, which are thoroughly protected, so that the cargo can be temporarily stored on them in perfect safety. There are six now godowns, each capable of holding 2,000 tons, and two old ones which will hold 1500 tons. Eventually it is contemplated to have accommodation for 20,000 tons. A feature less than 60 feet span. is not yet fully completed, has been satisfactory. The French mail steamers Petho and Hoogly regularly to the pier.

The Company has two steam cranes from Messrs. Taylor & Co., of Birkenhead, for landing machinery and other heavy articles. They are actually screwed into the bottom of the sea, and is thus more firmly secured than can be ittained by any other process.

As there was a great deal of discussion about the openings, it may be well to notice that this part of the pier seems to work satisfactorily, as in Singapore. This renders it all the more There is an opening 40ft. wide half way down. and one 20st, wide near the shore; and boats and sampans are doustantly passing through them with ease.

At the same time, I do not know but what this trial is yet of very serious importance, and may raise considerations of great weight; for so long as the pernicious and fatal practice of gambling prevails-and unfortunately it does extensively prevail-so long as the committees of clubs in this metropolis allow the practice of gambling to go on in the private rooms of clubs, so long as gentleman continue to follow this fatal vice which has brought so many a min to rain and shame, it a essential that the vice shall not be aggravat ed by a resort to practices inconsistent with the honour of gentlemen.

RUSSIA AND AFGHANISTAN. The correspondent of the Telegraph at S

Petersburg writes on the 6th February:-"The question of the boundaries of Afghaniatan is now at an end, the Russians finding that their real advantage was in coming to an agreement with England at any price. When it was so easy for the Russian Cabinet merely to take note of what England said, and preserve silence on the question, it is obvious that there mus have been something great to be gained if : gave up its temporary advantages and entered nto an 'arrangement with England.' In th abilation that will of course ensue on the renewed good understanding, it may be possible o get at what the designs of Russin really are At present the pacific policy is predominant. "The Goles of this morning has a very long article on the Attrek question. It gives a his torical sketch of the Turkomans and their re lations to Persia and Russia, and claims the Black River, or Kara-su, as the ethnographical and political frontier of Persia. The valley of the Gürgen, the next river to the north, was conquered by Nadir-Shab, but on his death it became again independent. The Turkomans have always made formys on Porsia, and carried off captives, and have long ceased to be under her influence. On the contrary, the Persian Government has often applied to Russia for aid against them. Consequently, in 1842, Captain—now Count—Putiatin made a naval expedition against the Turkoman pirates, and in 1859 there was another under Colonel Dande ville. The sea count of Persia is now protected by the Russian military naval station of Ashur-Ada, in the gulf of Astrabad. The Turkomans however, have always been somewhat under the influence of Russia since 1713, when Hodia-Nefess proposed to Peter the Great to conquer Khiva for him. They proffered their services to the Russian Commander-in-Chief in 1813, in the war ugainst Persia, and in 1820 they wished to become Russian subjects. In 1859, by an Ambassador, the Turkomans expressly mentioned the valley they owned between the Attrek and the Gurgen, and offered to the Emperor. As Russia and no desire for these wastes and deserts, she has always refused such offers. But, to prevent troubles and formys, the Government has been obliged to establish fortresses on the coast. In 1883 founded Novo-Alexandrofile, at the entrance of the Mertvii Kulbuk. In 1846 this fortress was changed to Cape Tuk-Karagan. Krasnovodsk was founded in 1869, and in 1870 the military post of Tash-Arbat-Kula was established in the l Balkhan Mountains, and in 1.71 the post of Tobikislay at the mouth of the Attrek. Russia ever wanted those torritories, it could get them directly from the Turkomans, without baying to make secret treatics with Persia." SUMMARIES OF HOME NEWS FROM THE LONDON PAPERS.

(Daily Telegraph.)
Tuesday, 11th February, 1873. General von Roon has ordered an investigntion into the charges made against Herr. Wagener by Deputy Lasker, of trafficking in railway concessions. From Berlin we learn that the impression produced in that city by Lasker's speech, which took him two bours and a balf to deliver, has been of the gravest kind, the more so that Prussian officials have hitherto been above suspicion. The redoubtable Deputy charged Prince Biron with having had accured to him shares worth 100,000 thalers, and Herr Wagener with accepting 40,000 thalers and a position on the directorate of the railway which he belped to promote, and which it appears stood in need of some official help, since, or its seven millions of nominal capital, only 400,000 thelers were really subscribed. Dr. Hessel was yesterday, at the German Consulate-General, presented with the testimonial raised to compensate him, so far as such means can avail, for the unfortunate error to which he become a victim. The funds collected in other quarters, and through the medium of this journal, amounted in all to nearly £1,200, and the carnest and simple proceedings of the forencen culminated in Dr. Hessel's touching request that a chare of the money, along with a handsome silver cup, which formed part of the testimonial, should be sent to his sorely afflicted father in Germany. At a meeting of the Northfleet Fund Committee, the Lord Mayor presiding, the subscriptions were reported as amounting to about £7,000, and a general scheme of distribution was agreed upon, according to which Mrs. Knowles will receive £1,000; the widow and family of the first officer, £800; while the remuinder is divided among the survivors and the relatives of those who perished—the brave seamen who contributed to the mitigation of the lisaster not being forgotten. Some remarks were made before the Committee adjourned on the advantage of holding an exhibition of uppliances for saving life, and on the absolute nesessity for scouring the enforcement of a distinotive distress signal at sea. In the Dublin Court of Queen's Bench, the prosecution of the Roman Catholic clergy charged with the exercise of undue influence at the Galway election began. The Attorney-General for Ireland opened the case against the first of the defendants on the list—the Rev. Mr. Loltus, curate of Dunmore, who was accused of baving, in the month of January, 1872, employed words in addressing his congregation which were of a character to constitute undue influence, according to the Act under which the presecutions were instituted. After giving particulars of the offence alleged, Mr. Palles called evidence in support of his statement. A remarkable action for damages, on account of slander and libel, was partly heard before Lord Chief-Justice Cookburn and a special jury in the Court of Queen's Bench. The plaintiff was Mr. Clayton, formerly of the Grenadier Guards: and the defendant, Mr. Jones, bad charged him with cheating at cards while, along with a Captain Parker, they were travelling down to Leauington for the purpose of attending Warwick Baces last spring. It appeared that the travellers were playing vingt-et-un; and that the dealer, Mr. Olayton, turned up a "natural:" whereupon he was accused by Mr.

FRIDAY, 14th February, 1873. .M. Thiers is nibbling away very steadily and effectually the buge incubus of the German war indumnity that lies so heavily upon France. Yesterday's official organ of the French Goversupont announces that a second payment of £8,000,000, on account of the fourth milliard. was made to Gormany about a week ago. Thus the balance of the indemnity still to be paid by France is, irrespective of interest, only £64,900,000; and when we consider the yield of the recent loan and the unswerving confidence of capitalists everywhere in the future of the country, it can hardly be doubted that the final evacuation will be effected months before the date fixed in the original Treaty of Pence-the

SINGULAR TALE OF A NOSE .- The readers of surgical works are doubtless familiar with those cases in which the nose is reported, after having been cut off, to have been successfully replaced—in one instance, after a dog had run away with it. An interesting example of the repurative power of nature in such an injury is recorded in this week's Wiener Medisin Wockenschr, by Dr. Mulfatti. On November 13, 1871, Lieutenant Preiser, which in barracks, had his nose cut off by a sabre. THE EMIGRANT. Oft when the sun is sinking fast, Far in the golden West, My spirit dies to those at home, It will not, cannot rest. Then when the shadows deepen long, And gently fades the light. I hasten to the dear old home

To spend the long dark night. Often I look across the waves Which home from me divide. And think of all the dear lov'd ones Across the other side. Ofitimes I stand and listen long To what the wild winds say ;

I listen to thou all the night;

And half the weary day. Oh, laughing waves, while as you roll, As if in merry glee, List up your voices, truly tell If lov'd ones still love me; Tell me, if those I've left behind And no'er again may ege,

If e'er they think of him who roams

Across the rolling sea. The wild and foaming waves go on And leave me all alone. They will not, cannot, tell to me About my distant home: They only mock my hitter pain Laugh at my foolish prayer;

Pass on and leave me-standing thus Weighed down with heavy care. Oh lov'd once oft I venture home. And see you sitting there: Weep not though now from thee I roam. But banish gnawing care. Oh, loy'd ones! send me from my boine Your love neross the sea,

That it may cheer the exile's heart
